This is the last day of my durational performance 'a year of multi-tasking', 13 September 2018-12 September 2019. Many thanks to all those who unwittingly participated. I'm firing off a few participation certificates by email this morning but if you've met with me this past year and don't receive one I apologise in advance for the omission -- and please feel free to ask for one. Lots to reflect on, including the immense commitment and courage that it takes to do this properly.

My performance has largely failed because of my bourgeois upbringing (always getting in the way of all that is good and worthy) and the unusually high contractual complications of this past year (buying and selling property, getting a mortgage), as well as extremes of emotion in response to loss and change. Quite simply, I have not had the guts to keep the performance visible throughout the year, in banks, in the school ground, at work, or at home. Next step: taking Linda Mary Montano's online course in performance.
